AS TO RESERVOIR SITES. Geological Survey Reports Water Supply Uncertain. Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 15.-A summary of the report of W. G. Russell, hydrographer of the United States geological survey, of a reconnoissance in southwestern Kansas indicates that in that section of the state, and also in adjacent portions of southwestern Colorado, suitable reservoir sites probably do not exist, and it is questioned whether a more detailed examination by the engineers is desirable.

Russell states that on Cimarron river it is possible a reservoir site may be found in the vicinity of Kenton, O. T., or farther up stream, but the water supply is uncertain. The river does not head in mountain areas which contain any considerable amount of snow, and there are fewer indications of flood waters in the upper portion of the course than in the lower. The north Canadian river is similar to the Cimarcon as its try not well adapted to furnishing large and continuous supplies of water.

Mr. Russell recommends that a gage be establised on the Comirron river at or near Kenton, and, also one on the headquarters of the Beaver Creek near and strength; Hood's Sarsaparilla cor- quaranaine line. the New Mexican line. Owing to the rects it, fact that the Cimarron in Kansas flows over a sandy bed and has low banks with broad bottom lands on one or both sides. the opportunities for the construction of an economical dam are not offered. Mr. Russell's report does not indicate that utilization of the surface waters of this portion of the state for irrigation on a large scale is practicable. A few opportunities were found where private capital might to advantage construct works which would irrigate small tracts of rich bottom lands.
